Bryant tax team heads to the finals

Tim Krumwiede
Tax Team Advisor

A team of four Bryant College senior accounting majors recently competed in the regional competition of the Arthur Andersen Tax Challenge held at New York University, one of nine locations around the country hosting the Challenge. The results are in and the Bryant Tax Challenge Team has been selected as one of ten finalists for this year's Tax Challenge National Competition to be held November 22-24 in St. Charles, Illinois. Of the Northeast teams which competed in New York, Bryant's team is the only one to advance to the finals. Congratulations to team members Brian Moran, Andrew Pratt, Christopher Quinn, and Chad West.

Arthur Andersen will fly the Bryant Tax Team to Chicago, where Limousine Service, complements of Arthur Andersen, will be waiting to take the team to St. Charles. Once in St. Charles, Bryant's team will compete for scholarship money against teams from Brigham Young University, California State Polytechnic University, College of William and Mary, Saint Louis University, The University of Akron, Thomas Moore College, University of Illinois, University of Michigan, and University of North Carolina-Charlotte.

Tax Challenge is the leading intercollegiate competition for accounting students. At the competition, teams develop a series of solutions based on an analysis of the business and personal financial activities of a fictitious taxpayer.

The regional competition case required students to review a tax return for a prior year and comment on errors in the return; prepare a detailed federal income tax liability projection; discuss tax planning options for the fictitious taxpayer; and prepare three brief memorandums on tax implications and planning options on various issues and alternatives the fictitious taxpayer was facing or considering. Each team was allowed seven hours to complete the case. Participants were provided with the internal revenue code, the income tax regulations, pencils, erasers, and a bottle of aspirin.

Bryant's success in this event started with the strong foundation team members received in their introductory tax course. As additional preparation for this event, Bryant team members developed their own problems and solutions based on a list of potential tax challenge topics. Additionally, team members met several times to work tax cases. An important part of the preparation for this event was for the team members to learn to work effectively as a group. By working together as a cohesive group, the team was able to complete a 37 page solution at the regional competition.

Accomplished accounting professor passes away

Robert A. Provost, 60, of Indian Trail, an accounting professor here at Bryant for 30 years, died Friday, October 25, in South County Memorial Hospital. He was the husband of Delores (Ogara) Provost.

Born in Attleboro, Mass., the son of the late Arthur and Eugene (Larochelle) Provost, he lived in Narragansett since 1969, previously living in Warwick.

Mr. Provost was a CPA and a CFE (certified fraud examiner). He developed and was coordinator of the CPA review program at Bryant. He was previously a senior accountant at Price Waterhouse from 1961 to 1964, and a controller at Brownell & Field Co. from 1964 to 1967.

Provost was a 1961 graduate of the University of Rhode Island. He was a member of the Rhode Island Society of CPAs and the American Institute of CPAs. He was an Air Force veteran of the Korean War.

Besides his wife, he leaves a son, Mark Provost of Coventry; three daughters, Nadine M. Provost and Nicole M. Provost, both of Narragansett, and Noelle M. Leite of Seekonk, MA.; a sister, Rena Schiller of West Chester, PA.; and a granddaughter.

A Mass of Christian Burial was held at St. Bernard Church, Tower Hill Road, Wickford.

Post office supervisor dies

Sandra D. Langford, 52, of Farnum Pike, the postmaster at Bryant for 23 years, died Sunday, November 3, in Rhode Island Hospital. She was the widow of Alfred H. Langford Jr., and had been suffering from varying degrees of cancer for the past two years.

Born in Providence, she was one of eight children of Marjorie E. (O'Donnell) Mountford of Smithfield and the late Donald W. Mountford. She was a lifelong resident of Smithfield and a communicant of St. Philip Church.

Sandy's devotion to her job and to Bryant was evident in her everyday performance. As stated by Madeline Houde her co-worker of thirteen years, "Like the post office motto, through rain, sleet, and snow, we were here." Sandy trained the students who were hired to work in the post office, a favor which many of them did not forget. Oftentimes students would call or visit years after they had graduated from Bryant. According to Irene Lanaway of the post office staff, "The students were very important to her." Madeline and Irene recalled a time when the three of them transported bag upon bag full of groceries to destitute student workers. As commented by David Simpson, Controller of Bryant, "Over the years, the kids [in the post office] have worked hard but have been treated well."

Besides her mother, Ms. Langford leaves a son, Sean M. Gallagher of North Providence; a daughter, Kacy M. Pimentel of North Scituate; four brothers, Michael P. Mountford and Kevin K. Mountford, both of Smithfield, Donald W. Mountford Jr. of Barry, VT, and Chet I. Mountford of Providence; three sisters, Sheila D. Turner of Glocester, Donna C. Comfort of Smithfield, and Jill A. Masso of Scituate, and two grandsons. She was the companion of Raymond Martini of Pawtucket.

The funeral will be held Friday at 8:30 a.m. within the Tucker-Quinn Funeral Home, 649 Putnam Ave., Route 44, Greenville, with a Mass of Christian Burial at 9:30 a.m. at St. Philip's Church on Putnam Avenue. Burial will be in Gate of Heaven Cemetery, East Providence.

Reality check

La la la...I just love to study. I live to study; books are my life. Exam here, exam there, and soon an exam everywhere. When not studying, it's my chance to work. Money makes the world go round and pays the bills in a suitable manner. Money and studying together make my life complete. I could ask for nothing more. If the genie were to pop out of some old lamp right now, I would sacrifice my three wishes to some unfortunate soul out there who hasn't yet discovered this wonderful meaning of life. Quite simply, life couldn't be any better. And then something happens to make my whole philosophy on life go to the birds; someone dies. It happens everyday, but the effect of such a spontaneous occurrence can never really be determined until it happens to someone who means a lot to you. There's no way to prepare yourself for death; the true grief is not realized until the bitter end has come.

Looking back on this calendar year, I've noticed a very peculiar trend; Bryant students, alumni, faculty, and support staff populations have all had a significant (more than one) number of deaths. What's incredibly unfortunate is the young ages at which most of them have left us; the odds should have been in their favor...

Having never lost any relatives or friends throughout my youth, it came as a shock to me when people I had seen everyday would suddenly die. It sobered me up a lot to witness losses within the community; life was no longer about success or failure, but more about realizing people's mortality. As I read the death notices in my mailbox, I couldn't help but regret never really knowing who the people were. Perhaps I had missed out on something in not ever hearing him or her speak, laugh, or cry.

And so the trend continues, carrying on its pattern outside the limits of the Tupper Campus. Something about this year is making many a lives morbid and pale. As if a preparation for what was to come, soon after Penny Stone, Mauricio Beltran Restrepo, and countless others interrelated with Bryant had died, the first death in my family (during my lifetime, anyway) occurred, leaving a horribly vacant hole somewhere deep inside of me. Remembering the last time we had spoken was a distant but familiar memory, and I suddenly wished to be back at that moment in time, if just to savor what I had already lost. But how was I to know then what I know now? How is anybody to ever realize that everyday and everybody is a treasure? Life itself makes you forget. To spend your whole life in retrospect would be a horrible thing; nothing would ever be accomplished. But to enjoy the time you spend as a living human being is a choice you have. Don't left such an opportunity—your only opportunity—go to waste.

Corrections

Last week, an article entitled "10 questions: An interview with Jill Quatrala" incorrectly identified Jill as being from the Phi Sigma Sigma sorority. She is actually in Theta Phi Alpha. Sorry, Jill.

Caption puts a damper on success

To Whom it May Concern:

I am writing after having read F.J. Talley's "International Flavor" article in the 10/24/96 edition of The Archway.

The International Student Organization worked very diligently to pull off such a successful United Nations Festival. I was initially pleased to see their efforts recognized by F.J. Talley's 'Corner,' only to be disappointed to see the incorrect caption beneath the photograph on the left. It states: "Many students gather around the Japan table at the United Nations Festival..." The students in the photograph, as well as the flag on the table, are from South Korea.

Whoever wrote this caption obviously did not visit the table or the table from Japan to learn more about South Korea and Japan. This is, unfortunately, another example of how racial stereotypes are frequently made without full knowledge of the people they allege to represent. If we are truly going to "internationalize" our campus and demonstrate respect for peoples from other parts of the world, we all must make a more sincere effort to learn about these cultures and be more careful with making generalizations.

I would think that a correction to the caption is in order and that an apology to the students featured should be made.

Very truly yours,

Julie Nora
Academic Coordinator

NOTE FROM THE EDITOR: I do apologize—seeing as how it is and was my sole responsibility to ensure that the material printed each week is correct—to all those whom I have offended with an incorrect caption. Thank you, Ms. Nora, for alerting myself to this embarrassing error.

Thank you, professors!

Two years ago, on November 15, 1994, Billie Jean Sanders questioned on Brynet why she or anyone else should pursue a liberal education. Either Brynet is super slow or else it took two professors two years to arrive to her question on e-mail. Last week, Professors Luthar and Camp answered her question in The Archway. Astrologers assure us that many of the brightest stars that sparkle take years to reach the earth.

The above aside, their answer was mixed. Professor Luthar, as always, provided clear thoughts which deeply influence our student life on the campus. His suggestion was highly relevant and precise.

The same cannot be said about Professor Camp. He took off on a tangent and explained how a friend of his who studied sociology like Professor Carter loved "hawking with the Saudi King." Unless he meant "bird watching," I must say that such a cruel sport does not do justice to a liberal education. He described our Board of Trustees as a bunch of narrowly trained "business people" and expressed surprise that a Rhode Island CEO, whom he knows personally, is both "smart and intellectual." He claimed that he was a big help for Exxon at the US Department of Agriculture. Since when is gas an agricultural commodity? Since Ronald Reagan described ketchup as a vegetable?

Finally, he teased Billie Jean, a business major: "What do you do if you are narrowly trained and when you graduate you find there aren't any jobs in your field? Starve?" Perhaps she'll go hawking with him.

Yours truly,

Jamie Secord

VANDALISM

October 25, 1996- While students were returning from off campus, a light pole in the townhouse village was pulled down. This was spotted by a DPS officer walking from the C-4 lot to the townhouses. An electrician had to be called in to work on the exposed live wires. The amount of damage was over $600. An investigation is underway. A previous and similar incident has recently been solved with the guilty party having to appear in court for their crime. Monetary restitution will be the first step in the process.

VANDALISM

October 25, 199- In the Bryant Center second floor ladies' room, three soap dispensers were torn from the wall. No suspects have been found at this time.

VANDALISM(TAMPERING WITH FIRE SAFETY EQUIPMENT)

October 26, 1996- A student was seen discharging a fire extinguisher outside their suite window. When questioned, he admitted doing it. The student was cooperative. The custodial crew from the Bryant Center was called, and they cleaned the dry chemical. Charges were filed.

DRUG VIOLATION/ALCOHOL VIOLATION

October 26, 1996- Officers responded to a resident's report of the smell of marijuana. DPS noticed that the suspect had one bag of marijuana in plain view. Several bottles of alcohol were also noticed. The drugs and alcohol were confiscated and destroyed. Charges have been filed.

VANDALISM

October 27, 1996- A student reported that the main suite door in one of the residence halls was vandalized. The fire door was left hanging off it's back hinges. The student also reported that cigarettes were missing from the suite. DPS is investigating this crime.

FIRE ALARM-FALSE

October 30, 1996- Students in a residence hall blocked a heat vent. The blockage redirected the heat to the heat sensors in their bedroom. It caused the alarm to go off. The blockage was removed. The students in that room were fined for causing the alarm to go off.

FIRE ALARM-TRUE

November 3, 1996- DPS responded to an alarm in the dorm village. A check of the hall found that a fire extinguisher had been discharged in the laundry room. All rooms were checked and several students were still found sleeping. The building was cleared. After the dry chemical dissipated, the alarm was reset and all units were cleared. The alarm was ruled as malicious.

FIRE ALARM-TRUE

November 11, 1996- DPS responded to a townhouse for a fire alarm. Upon arrival they met with the students in one of the units who said that their oven caught fire while trying to broil steaks. They used the fire extinguisher to put out the fire. Apparently the tray that they were cooking the steaks on was full of grease and this is what caught fire. The electrician reset the alarm and all units cleared. DPS hopes that an incident like this will be prevented in the future by people being more careful when they are cooking, especially with grease.

FIRE ALARM-FALSE

November 11, 1996- DPS responded to a fire alarm in hall 11, fourth floor. The floor was very warm when they arrived on the scene. In one of the rooms they found that a heat sensor had popped, thus causing the room to be extremely hot and setting off the alarm. The electrician responded, replaced the heat sensor, and reset the alarm system.

THEFT

November 21, 1996- While on mobile patrol, A DPS officer was approached by a student who told him that his vehicle had been broken into and that an amplifier and speaker were stolen. An investigation is still going concerning this matter.

ATTENTION STUDENTS

Public Safety would like to remind the Students not to cover the heat vents in any way, including cardboard, towels etc. Covering these vents could in itself create a fire hazard. If your room is too hot, please call Physical Plant at X6052 during the day-time hours or Public Safety at X6001 after hours to have your heat turned down. Thank you!

Vandalism- While most students do not vandalize, those who do create a great deal of damage. Last year the cost of vandalism on campus was well over $100,000. Vandalism is a crime. Do not allow others to vandalize your campus. Please report vandalism.

The Public Safety Beat is sponsored in part by DPS and Students-For-A Safer Campus in order to comply with the Federal Students Right-To-Know and Campus Security Act.

DPS encourages the use of their escort service which is available 24 hours a day to anyone upon request. Call 232-6001.

The director of Public Safety, Mr. George Coronado, is available every Wednesday from 12:00 to 1:00 p.m. in the Bryant Center Conference room #1 to discuss any issues with students. Mr. Coronado is also available at other times upon request. Call 232-6001.

Fire Safety Information:

To the Bryant Community:

Tampering with life safety equipment has become a problem on campus. There have been three incidents regarding discharged fire extinguishers in the Residence Halls in the last two weeks. The safety of each student is of paramount concern to the college, and we have formulated specific rules and regulations pertaining to fire and safety issues. Please be advised that tampering with any fire alarm or fire protection system will result in your being held financially responsible for any damages to Bryant property. Along with financial responsibility, you may be fined and disciplined. Should the circumstances warrant it at the time, you could be placed under arrest for tampering with life safety systems and equipment.

The following is the fine structure to discourage misuse of fire safety equipment. Within the Rhode Island fire law, the Interference with Fire Alarm Apparatus and Equipment states that "every person who unlawfully and without just cause- willfully or knowingly,- tampers with, interferes with, or in any way impairs any public fire alarm apparatus, wires or associated equipment shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000, imprisoned for not less than 1 nor more than 5 years, or both.

In order to discourage tampering with fire alarm equipment, the college will impose the following fine structures: Tampering with fire extinguishes = $75 fine; missing fire extinguishes = $150 fine; tampering with heat or smoke detectors = $300 fine. Individuals will be held responsible for any of this equipment that may be located in their living areas. The DPS Fire & Safety Coordinator will issue citations to individuals and/or areas that are in violation of the standard regarding Fire Safety. Students will be held accountable for their actions. There is also a $1,000 REWARD for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of any person causing a MALICIOUS FIRE ALARM.

Your cooperation in this matter will ensure the safety of all in the Bryant community. Together we can make this a non-issue on campus.

Application for Special Olympics Directors

Scott Taylor

Bryant College will be the host of the 1997 Northern Rhode Island Special Olympics for Special Olympians in Northern Rhode Island. This past summer's Olympics in Atlanta touched the hearts of many athletes and spectators. Like the Summer Olympics, the Northern Rhode Island Special Olympics creates an overwhelming enthusiasm and strength in the athletes to compete among one another. People from all around the state and within Bryant volunteer their time and efforts to make it a success each year.

Gain the experience and opportunities of being a leader. Applications for Director and Assistant Directors will be available next week, November 11 - 15, in the Senate Office. They will be due back on in the Senate office on Monday, November 18, and interviews will be on the evening of Wednesday, November 20.

If you have any questions, please contact myself, Scott Taylor, at x4006, or the Senate office at x6271.

Please do not hesitate to apply; the opportunity is open everyone.

The $10,000 Shot Is Just One Of Many Contests Planned As Bryant "Tips-Off" the Basketball Season Tomorrow Night

What would you do with $10,000? You should plan your investments now because if you make the mystery shot, $10,000 will be yours. No strings attached!

Do not forget to turn in your stamped Bulldog Sports Card at Black and Gold Night to have an even better chance at winning prizes. If, for some reason, you never had your card stamped, do not worry. We have a ton of stuff to give away. We have a FREE SKY DIVE, gift certificates, CD's, tickets, Bulldog Gear, and much more. Everyone can win!

Register for the $10,000 shot from 6:45 p.m. up until the end of half-time of the game featuring the Bryant Women's Basketball Team against the Nor'easter Storm (a USA Basketball affiliate). Buy as many raffle tickets as you'd like at only one dollar each for a chance at getting your name drawn for a "shot" to win the money.

Following the basketball game, the madness will begin. First, the disk jockey will introduce the dance performance of Rhythm and Pride. The word is that this talented group puts on a great show - do not miss them! Second, the disk jockey will talk us through the Three-Point Challenge in which everyone is eligible to participate. There will be two brackets consisting of students and faculty. The winner of the two brackets will then challenge President Machtley for bragging rights. Third, Zeta Phi Beta will stun the crowd with another "don't miss" dance performance. Next on the agenda is the Frosh Hoops match-up. Come watch the '97 Frosh Hoops champions take on the '00 champions to see who should really hold the title. Also, Bryant's own High Spirits will showcase their much-talked-about act. If you have not had a chance to see this band perform around campus, you do not want to miss this opportunity.

And, of course, a party would not be a party without DJ Niko performing his always masterful mix of music. If you have trouble finding the main gym, follow the bass.

Contests, prizes, and a smashing display of entertainment. Can you feel the excitement already? The season is only just beginning! Come to Black and Gold Night and walk away with prizes and a great evening.

10 Questions: An interview with Brian Willinsky

Kenneth Wakefield
Archway Staff Writer

Brian Willinsky is a Sophomore Senator and the Speaker of the Council for the Student Senate. He was an orientation leader this past summer and is a peer educator.

Kenneth Wakefield: When did you first notice your leadership skills?

Brian Willinsky: I first noticed my leadership ability while I was in high school. I was the Class President for all four years. The event that really helped move forward in this area was the Hugh O'Brian seminar, which I took during my sophomore year (in high school). It included student leaders from all over the state of Connecticut and had a very large influence on the way I thought about leadership.

K.W.: What is the most important event you have led in your life?

B.W.: That would have to be the Community Leadership Educational Workshop. We did it in high school two years in a row (my junior and senior years). It was put together by three other students and myself for the sophomores. It was the very first thing like this in Connecticut run entirely by students. I pushed for this idea because I think the label 'Generation X' is neither accurate nor fair. Not everybody in our age range has the ideals of the 'Generation Xers,' and it is not fair that we all get labeled by other people's perception of 'Generation Xers.'

K.W.: Where are your leadership skills used most effectively in your daily life?

B.W.: They are used mostly when I am performing my duties as Speaker of the Council. I have to run meetings effectively, make sure that we do not deviate from the agenda for the meeting. I have to keep the meeting on track while giving enough time for everyone to speak their minds on whatever subjects are on the floor.

K.W.: What are the leadership skills needed to be a good Speaker of the Council?

B.W.: The most important is to have good communication skills; I also have to be assertive in sticking to the agenda, be open-minded, act professional, and use critical thinking.

K.W.: What are some of the ways you improve your leadership skills?

B.W.: I take a lot of constructive criticism and use it to my benefit. I ask my friends to be honest about what I do and how I could do it better.

K.W.: How do you feel being a student leader has affected your life?

B.W.: It definitely has had a positive impact upon my life. I learn things outside the classroom that will be beneficial to me when I go out into the real world. I now can get along with people a lot better both on both professional and personal levels.

K.W.: Do you feel that Bryant has had any influence on your being a leader?

B.W.: I think it has pretty much been a continuation of high school. It just continued in my freshman year when I was elected to the senate. However, I also found out that college is a lot different from high school; you have to be more open minded and are forced to grow up quickly.

K.W.: As a leader of the Bryant community, what are some of the things you would like to see changed?

B.W.: I would like to see a different attitude from the students. About 100-200 students are the ones who want to see something changed upon this campus and are willing to do something about it. If students want things to be changed they have to be the initiators. Some of the things I would like to see changed are having more activities upon the weekend to keep people here and a better course selection with more liberal arts courses available. I would also like to see more communication with the faculty and a closer inspection of the curriculum.

K.W.: What message would you give to potential leaders?

B.W.: Go for anything that comes your way; there is nothing more expensive than regret. Don't be afraid of failure—it only holds you back.

K.W.: Who is your hero and why?

B.W.: Hugh O'Brian. He is a famous actor from the 60's and 70's known from westerns. He is most famous, however, for his Youth Foundation seminar that is in all 50 states. It is set up for sophomores in high schools because he feels that that is the critical time for young leaders.

Residence Life Community Service Teams: Reaching out to care and scare

In an effort to meet and respond to the various and changing issues residents have, the Office of Residence Life runs a continuous training program for their resident assistants. Each week, speakers from on and off campus address topics from multi-cultural awareness to crisis intervention. Recently, a community service component has been added to their program which allows them to serve their off campus community. Having contacted numerous resources, the staff chose two activities in which they could contribute to a group in need. The two activities they chose were at McAuley Village in Providence and St. Philip's Parish in Greenville.

At McAuley Village, a low income residential community housing for single parent famiassisted the parish's youth organization at their annual Halloween Haunted Woods. Working as guides and goblins, they helped to raise over three hundred dollars for the organization and its future activities for the parish youth. At both sites, the staff's sense of citizenry helped to provide for a community in need. Making friends, having fun, and servicing their community, the Bryant Resident Assistants were able to show their genuine concern and respect,

The video game revolution

Paul Hunter

Nintendo has delivered a new blow to the video game industry. It has been dominated in the last year by Sega, with their Sega Saturn, and Sony, with their Playstation. The once-fallen king of video games is back to reclaim its crown with the new Nintendo 64.

The Nintendo 64 is a cartridge-based system unlike the 32 bit CD-based competitors, Sega and Sony. It goes for anywhere between $200 to $250, depending on the retailer. The games, on the other hand, can be expected to be a little steeper than the cheaper to produce competitors' CD games. There are two games on hand for review at the present time; Super Mario 64, and Pilotwings 64. Both featured dazzling 3-D graphics and stereo-quality sound.

Super Mario 64 is ranked as one of the best games I've ever played. Its unlimited camera angles, stunning visuals, and tons of secrets kept me glued to the television set for hours. The graphics of this game have to be seen to be believed and can't be described in words. Just watching this game is a treat for most. Mario's reactions to his environment are extremely life-like, from his huffing and puffing when he is hurt or tired, to his cheers of joy as he does a backflip. He is totally emersed in a lush 3-D environment and is loving it, judging by his optimistic expressions throughout the game. Nintendo's mascot is back and in effect!!! The control of this game is truly phenomenal, all due to Nintendo's ingenious analog control pad. This pad makes fluid 3-D control a snap, unlike the clumsy, basic 8 direction controllers of the past. As far as the Super Mario 64 goes, it's a must have for all die hard gamers.

Some might remember the original 16 bit game Pilot Wings for the Super Nintendo system. It was then praised for the most revolutionary graphics and game play of its time. If you liked the original, you're going to love the new and improved Pilotwings 64. This game is sort of a flight simulator with a wide variety of aircrafts, ranging from a gyrocopter to a hang glider. There are various characters to choose from, each one with a unique flying style. An assortment of islands are used as the playing field for this game. An island shaped like the United States is thrown in as a cool bonus. This addicting game will keep you playing until all levels are mastered.

The Nintendo 64 is on the move. However, it has a lot of catching up to do. As far as its library of games is concerned, the Nintendo 64 is lacking compared to Sony and Sega at the present time. Not that these two aren't producing high quality games, don't get me wrong, but I feel that Nintendo 64 does to video games what color did to television. Yet these two preliminary first generation games truly show that when it comes down to it, sometimes quality is better than quantity.

Greek Community hosts scholarship seminar

.....

Last Thursday, October 29, the Greek Community held a Scholarship Seminar in the Pappito Dining Hall. The community, with the assistance of IFC Scholarship Chair, Ian Kennaway, and Panhellenic Scholarship Chair, Jill Lewis, realized the importance of establishing scholarship goals for the community. Some of these goals are raising the overall GPA of the Greek Community above the all-student average, to establish a Faculty of the Year award, and to make the resources of the Learning Center more readily known and accessible.

Attending the meeting were both the IFC and Panhellenic Executive Boards, along with the President, Scholarship Chair, and Membership Educators from each chapter. To assist them in implementing concrete ways to reach these goals were guest speakers Martha Ucci, of the Learning Center, and Bill Phillips, the Director of Counseling Services. Martha Ucci presented the community with a "Scholarship Binder", which is readily available for all Greek members in the Greek Life Office. This binder contains all the available resources of the Learning Center. So, if you have questions, they've got answers. Bill Phillips presented ways in which to better manage our hectic lives and schedules. Both presenters gave the members ways in which to reach their ultimate goals. We'd like to thank them both for their time and concern for our scholarship goals and objectives. All who attended will certainly use the information presented for their own lives and will be able to share this information with the other members of their chapters.

Getting the low-down on Luscious Jackson

Bari Bendell

"It is just the way things go," I told myself regarding my disappointment in not having found the time to try and get an interview with Luscious Jackson before their performance at Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel on Saturday, November 2. Besides, since I hadn't found the time to get the interview, how would I ever have found the time to research, prepare questions, and conduct the actual interview? Well, as it turns out, like most things that happen in my life, the strangest things occur when I least expect them to.

As I was eating lunch with one of my friends on Friday, I was approached by an individual who had managed to get an interview with Luscious Jackson on Saturday evening before their show. I expressed my "that's great, good luck" sentiment only half way through when he said, "I won't be able to do it, would you mind doing it?" Would I be able to do it?...hmm, let me think about that for a second: "O.K., if it helps you out." Of course I was trying to suppress my utter joy and excitement at his unfortunate predicament which became my opportunity to interview some of the funkier women in music today. I had just about 24 hours to prepare myself for the interview and try to come up with some interesting questions that they hopefully haven't been asked eight gazillion times.

Lupo's, 5:30 p.m., Saturday. I had arrived at the designated time and was motioned to a coach by one of the bouncers. He told me that "after their sound check, their manager will be over with a couple of them." The sound check lasted an hour, and I had begun to wonder if I was going to have any time with them at all. A few minutes later, the manager came up and introduced himself to me. He asked if there was anyone in particular I would like to speak with. Who was I to be choosy: "I suppose whoever is the most interested in speaking with me." Another few minutes went by before Jill Cunniff (bass player, lead singer and song writer) was escorted to my couch.

Bari: A lot of your music has a very NYC feel to it, is it a conscious effort?

Jill: A lot of people say that. I guess that's because on our last record we did a song about New York called "City Song" and people think that is what we are all about. We tried to make this album (Fever In Fever Out) more universal.

Bari: Which song off your new album is your favorite to perform?

Jill: I like signing "Why Do I Lie" because it is like a slow ballad and people are expecting us to rock out.

Bari: At the CMJ (College Music Journal) conference in New York City this September, you guys played a surprise show under the name Energy Sucker at Fraggie Rock (a gay and lesbian club), and one of the promoters explained that it was because 'Luscious Jackson wanted to give something back to the gay community, who have supported them from the beginning.'

Jill: That could be the case; Kate, our drummer, knows them, and we needed to do a small show under another name and thought that would be a great place to do it. We definitely have such a good gay and lesbian crowd. I like that interpretation; we totally appreciate it and have done a lot of gay press. Kate's a very out lesbian.

At this point the Josephine Wiggs Experience began their VERY LOUD sound check, and Jill offered to take me into the dressing room so that we could continue. Once there, we began again, however, we were sometimes interrupted by Kate (who was always looking for someone) or Gabby (who was either ordering dinner or looking for Kate), who also answered a few questions, for which there was no space to print.

Bari: You were the first band to have an album put out on Grand Royal (Beastie Boys' Mike Diamond's label). Do you get tired or upset at being identified as "the Beasties' little sisters?"

Jill: Well, we were tired of that from the beginning. Luckily we don't get that much anymore.

Bari: When the Beastie Boys came onto the scene with "License to Ill" in the mid 1980's, they portrayed themselves as sexist, homophobic, and macho, but now they seem like they've matured or moved beyond that. Is that how they have always been, was it all just an act?

Jill: Yes, it was all an act, or—as I call it—an aberration to be nice. I don't know if they have repented, but they've definitely made an effort to redeem themselves in the public eye and in their personal lives. You know, they were like eighteen years old and somebody offered them a record contract, a bunch 'a' beer, some new outfits, and gold chains. I always allow people to change, because you can't hold people to their past. I look at some of the people I've dated...

Bari: What is the collective attitude of the band, or is there one?

Jill: I feel like we have all really changed and gone in our own directions. We have all matured enough in the same way to make a record that is cohesive, but if you asked us all individually, we would all have slightly different takes on it.

Bari: So that would explain the side projects like The Kostars?

Jill: Sure. The Kostars was Vivian (Keyboard and vocals) and I; we decided to make a record that would go back to the roots of song writing. Luscious Jackson was more of an experiment in sampling, so we went back to using all acoustic guitars, wrote really simple songs, and recorded them. Looking back on it, I think it was an important step in making this record because it was a lot more song based and less loop based than our previous works.

Bari: Will there be more Kostar albums to come?

Jill: Yes, in fact we hope to work with Josephine Wiggs (bass player from The Breeders and opening act for Luscious Jackson) again.

Bari: I just mailed my absentee ballot today. Are you going to vote?

Jill: Yes!

Bari: Dole has tried unsuccessfully to use "Soul Man", and "Born in the USA" for his campaign. If he wanted a Luscious Jackson song, which song do you think he would try to use?

Jill: I bet he would like "Why Do I Lie."

Bari: So, who is Manny and why were you searching for him on your first album?

Jill: Manny was Gabby's (bands' guitar player and vocalist) mother's boyfriend when she was a kid, and we needed an album cover. They had these great photos of him like lounging in his underwear; I don't know what gave us the gumption to put them on the cover, but her mom was like 'go for it,' and it ended up being kind of classic. So that's the story, and no one knows where he is.

Bari: How has your perspective of the music industry changed since "In Search Of Manny" (released in 1992)?

Jill: Well, I know a lot more now. I've learned that it is actually a business; if you are going to sell records, then it is a business, and you have got to get that straight.

Bari: Was that upsetting?

Jill: No, I got over the bummer about it and saw through the whole 'I don't want to be a sell-out' mentality. If you have a record on the market, you are in the market and you are in business. Even if you are on some tiny label, there is a bottom line. There are a lot of things that I think should be changed, like how some artists get treated poorly. So many of them work really hard and only get a small percentage, and that's the bummer about it.

Bari: As a DJ, I've noticed that several versions or mixes of a song will be sent to us for airplay; does Luscious Jackson have complete control over what is sent out?

Jill: Oh yeah, we mixed the latest radio one ourselves, and then we hired people for some of the others, and if we didn't like them, they didn't go anywhere.

This is not where our interview ended. However, Jill and I continued to talk about the band, their new video for "Naked Eye" (which will be out soon), her interest in reading and teaching about women's spirituality, touring, and a song she wrote about mother nature for the Beastie Boys to record. The show itself was wonderful, and I strongly recommend seeing them the next time they are in town. Tune into 88.7 WJMF to hear some cuts off of their albums; you won't be disappointed.

When not interviewing musicians, Bari Bendell is the General Manager and a DJ at 88.7 WJMF-FM. Bari also wishes to thank Nigel for doing the leg work and getting this interview for the station and The Archway.

Ranger Challenge: ROTC's "Varsity Sport"

Captain Christopher Granfield
Sergeant Bruce Stobb

Being a member of the Ranger Challenge team gives female and male Army ROTC cadets another way to win honors for their college. Ranger Challenge, Army ROTC's "varsity sport," is a series of physical endurance and military skills competitions designed to test the mettle of cadets and their ability to work as a team.

Ranger Challenge is a tough, demanding, eight-event competition. Events in the 30 hour, non-stop challenge include a physical fitness test, marksmanship, quickness in building and crossing a rope bridge over a water obstacle, locating designated markers using a compass, disassembling and assembling designated weapons, a patrolling written exam, hand grenade assault course, and a 10 kilometer road march.

This year's annual competition was held on the 19th and 20th of October at Fort Devens, Massachusetts. The temperature was cold, the wind was blowing hard, and a "Nor'easter" was fast approaching, but the challenge between 21 colleges went on. The tempo of the events was extremely high, teams went straight from event to event with the "capstone" event being the 10 kilometer road march. This road march was supposed to be a march carrying 25 pounds of equipment per person in which the average mile is done in approximately 12 minutes. Inevitably it turned into a dead-out run with teams finishing in the forty to fifty minute range. The Challenge was officially concluded on Sunday, and the Ranger Challenge Team from the University of New Hampshire took top honors. The team representing both Bryant and Providence Colleges was coached by Cpt. Christopher Granfield; the team members were Eric Fortin, Steve Geroux, David Higbie, John Tobin, Tim Starke, John Maloney, Jeremy Black, Dan Sarantopoulos, and Mike Avenick.

Placing in the "middle of the pack" was not a great concern. I was more concerned with the competition's by-products of heightened cohesion among team members and, of course, the increased physical fitness. We worked out every morning at Providence College from 0530 to 0730, and used Saturdays to focus on the more intricate skills involved. We had forty-three days to prepare for the competition, and the team members gave 110% the whole time.

The team of nine was whittled down from an original group of 21 students, who showed up the first day of training. I was concerned that there was only one returning student from last year's team but overjoyed at the longevity that a younger team represented. The last "cut" that I had to make was a tough one because of my personal feelings for some of the participants. My feelings had to be put aside in the interest of peak performance for the team as a whole.

I was disappointed that my team was composed of only men. I started with two women who were academically qualified and had extremely high physical fitness scores but could not compete because of academic conflicts. I'm hoping for a more well-balanced team next year with competitors who are even more "hungry."

What's the Newman Club?

Recently I was asked by a staff member about the status of the Newman Club. For those who don't know, a Newman Club is an association of Catholic students on a college campus. Apparently there had been such a club here at Bryant; however, my predecessor, Father Doug Spina, had informed me before I started that it has been inactive for several years.

The purpose and activities of a Newman Club are many. Most of these clubs involve themselves in religious activities and celebrations. They also avail themselves of the opportunity to learn more about their Catholic faith and timely issues in the public arena that the Church can offer some perspective on. Many of the clubs also get involved in apostolic service in the community in a variety of ways. And last but not least is the social dimension. Newman Clubs sponsor a variety of social activities to enable members to come together to enjoy one another's company and to build a sense of community, fellowship, and support.

While the Newman Club here at Bryant has been inactive, I would certainly be open to offering whatever help I can if students are interested in reviving it. Unfortunately, I cannot give unlimited amounts of time to bringing this about, due to my part-time position here and the demands of my parish. However, I would be most willing to meet with and guide any students who would like to take the initiative and get something going. It wouldn't have to be a major undertaking. It's by taking small steps that you learn to walk.

In the meantime, I will be offering information on activities sponsored by the Catholic Campus Ministers throughout the state so that anyone interested may participate. These activities include retreat days and special speakers' engagements. I'll announce these at Sunday night Mass and in this column when time permits.

The Mad Sage takes a name

Myron Gorham
Archway Staff Writer

Now back among humans, he realized that he must have a name. He had abandoned his original name at rebirth. Now he had been rejuvenated, so he needed a name. But what should he name himself? He could think of nothing, and any old name wouldn't do. He needed something unlike anything the world had seen before; something extraordinary. He wanted his name to trample over the lips of all who would utter it. But his mind was blank.

Walking through the big city, he contemplated a name while absorbing the shock of city life. Rugged old men lined the streets in a daze; it was like they, too, were withered by the city. Cars sped by in a race without end, spitting out toxins that soured the air, and he had just started breathing again. Crowded sidewalks filled with bitterness and confusion. Beggars were being shoed away like annoying bees. Trash littered, all beauty had been degraded to filth. Barred stores lining each side of the street. An argument just ahead and a brutal fight to his left; both stood out amongst the deafening noise and blinding crowd of the city. Hustlers of all sorts stood out in the worn advertisements. And an ominous smell;—a mixture of toxic gases—was eagerly consumed by many. He was lost in the vileness of the city. But this was where he must begin, and thus, this was where he must give himself a name.

He then felt a quick jab to his back, and was pulled into an alley-way. He remained unscared; this was not his day to die, and he knew it. Before him, pointing his little gun, was a young boy demanding that he give him all his money. He responded, "I don't think so," looking at the little boy with a 'how sad' expression.

"Give me the money or I'll shoot!" the jittery boy decreed, looking both ways down the alley as if he knew he was about to get caught.

"No!" he said firmly and finally.

In their otherwise hectic schedules, sometimes as early as 7:30 a.m. or as late as 10:30 p.m., they purchased the starter culture (in other words, they brought culture to Bryant's campus), grew and analyzed larger scale cultures from the starter, lysed those cells to liberate the proteins and contaminants, and then purified Taq polymerase from among the broad range of cellular proteins and non-protein contaminants. the worst, I cautioned them that lab procedures often do not work the first time even under ideal lab conditions (which we certainly do not have) and that they shouldn't be too disappointed if our preparation failed.

Last Thursday night, we ran the activity assays that would determine the quality of our preparation, the fruit of two weeks' labor. About 9 p.m., above the glow of 310nm ultraviolet light, these students huddled around the results, pushing each other gently aside to be the first to see. I stared in disbelief at results that showed conclusively that our preparation outperformed a commercial sample that they had tested for comparison. Had they mixed up the reaction tubes? What was going on?

I repeated the tests on Friday, alone. The same result...it worked!

With our fixation on financial service businesses at Bryant, students may be unaware and faculty may forget that wealth is generated and must be continuously maintained by manufacturing, adding value to raw materials in converting them to useful goods. The newest manufacturing business in the world, and one in which the USA is the undisputed leader, is biotechnology - converting cell products and processes to drugs, food products, and engineering materials through manipulation of DNA. With these students' efforts, Bryant College has achieved a uniquely progressive and thorough biotechnology business program.

"Go ahead...shoot me," he implored.

"Forget this, you're whacked!" The boy obviously had no intention of killing him. He had just hoped he could scare the money from him.

As the boy ran away, it came to him as quickly as the bullet that then pierced his skin just below the heart. He woke up in the hospital connected to tubes and machines. But the only thing

Running naked through the streets: The birth of an inner child

Nigel Kalada Fubara
Archway Staff Writer

The Rotunda is filled with the clatter and chatter of everyone around you. You feel the rhythms of the school like waves washing over you. Cresting and breaking. Lapping softly against the coasts of your conscience. It's a break between classes, and people are doing what they always do. Some athletic-looking guys are making eyes at a group of girls, who are trying hard not to look too interested. Some sorority sisters are making plans for the weekend, stressing some small detail and loving every minute of it. An intense group of young men are repeatedly mentioning to one another how they will most likely fail some Finance course and how the professor is so hard that it's unreal. The smell of the specialty coffee from the Bagel Wagon reaches you, and you decide a coffee and a smoke would be awfully nice. You go to get your coffee, and as you wait in line to pay, you notice the pattern. It hits you. The surge. Like a flash of energy, you are touched. This could be any other day of the week. The exact faces would change, but the clothes, the conversations, the Greek letters on the sweaters and pull-overs, and the routine would all remain the same. Imperceptibly, the power tie around your neck tightens. The same one that you thought was so sharp when you looked in the mirror this morning. You don't bother loosening it, knowing that will do no good. This constriction squeezes your soul. You are looking at clones of yourself. Replicas of a product being churned out of here yearly. You don't have to look down to know that the shoes on the feet on the short kid that passes by are very similar to your own. A lot like the pair on your feet, or the pair in your closet. You don't have to be here tomorrow to know that someone just like you will wear the same suit and the power tie and feel ready for their presentation. The mirror images cross cultural and race lines. Half the people look like they stepped out of a Docker's commercial or the pages of some fashion magazine, stealing the look of a mannequin to feed their individuality. The problem is, they all robbed the same mannequins. Everyone an individual making a statement, in exactly the same way. Dressing like the members of alternative groups who also express their individuality in exactly the same way as the next group. Even the few who are different are different in the identical manner. You want to look into your soul. You want to see something in yourself that is not replicated in the speech, haircuts, clothes, and weekend plans of the hundreds of reflections of you strewn out across this campus, oblivious to you and your spiritual dilemma. You feel the surge. You want to run, to cry, to shout, to strip yourself of all the markings of uniformity. You want to look within yourself and find you. You want to pour out fragments of your essence. Show that you are different. You are not an unwitting soldier in the Seattle grunge army. You are not a product of Tommy Hilfiger's imagination. You were not created by The Gap. You are different. You feel the surge.

Who are you? Where is your personal pain? Where is your special unmatched emotion? Your unbridled passion and fire? You must look within others to find the keys to the inner sanctum of your soul. A place only you can truly know. To find yourself in the damp and dusty recesses of your untraveled psyche and soul, you must know how others found their paths, took their journeys and discovered themselves. You must feel their surge. The raw emotion purified and distilled from their souls poured out on paper. Follow the flow of the stream of their pain and anger and fear, hope, and love until it leads you to the river of your being, where the tide pulls you down and under until you are lost. Face to face with your soul. Nowhere to hide. No need to hide. This is what poetry is. It is the surge. These are the stories of the journey. A signpost shrouded in the fog that leads you within, strips you of the reflections and mirror images and leaves you bare. And free.

The surge.

An old woman retelling the painful yet exhilarating account of her journey long ago to womanhood—her loves and losses and lives.

It pulls you closer.

A young man feeling as if his world has disappeared, a world once lit by the smile of a woman he loves.

A world no longer tangible or meaningful, covered in darkness because the smile which brightened it no longer shines on him.

The surge.

A middle-aged man who fears for the coming life winter, feels its cold fingers brush the gray in his temples and must brace himself for its chill alone because he does not know how to accept its somber beauty with another.

This is the surge. Follow their paths, let the stories and poems guide you to yourself, let the echo of their emotions empower you to look within, and there you will find how different you are and how in your unbreakable solitude and loneliness you are like us all. And a part of us all.

A guide book will soon be here. A signpost to point the way. The literary magazine will soon arrive. Feel the surge.

Next week: A heart to heart with the creator of the Bryant Literary Magazine's, Sharon Pacheco, and the pain, joy and labor she went through to bring the literary magazine to life, bearing the inner child for us all.

At half mast

During the past two weeks, Bryant has lowered its flags to half mast because we have lost two members of our campus community — Bob Provost of the Accounting Department and Sandy Langford of the Post Office. The practice of lowering flags to half mast is a Bryant tradition and our way of acknowledging our respect for Bob and Sandy, and so begins the grieving process for the people at Bryant whose lives they touched. I chose this topic today because many of our students have yet to face the death of a relative or other important person in their lives, and I wanted to talk a bit about recognizing the importance of other community members in our lives before we lose them.

Perhaps I should be clear that this will not be a eulogy for Bob or Sandy. There are many other people at Bryant more qualified to do that. But throughout their years at Bryant, they touched the lives of hundreds or thousands of our community members. Just think about it. To how many students has Bob taught accounting principles? And how many committees did he serve on during that time? How many staff people had to ask Sandy (in some cases—like mine—again and again) how to use Federal Express, or how to distribute mass mailings? And how many of us had lunch or casual conversations with them over the years? The impact of their passing will not be felt solely by the Post Office or the Accounting Department, but by all of us because they were our colleagues and our friends.

Have you ever stopped to think that you are also the colleagues and friends of many faculty members, staff members and other students? Years ago, I remember reading a short description about leadership and relationships. The description talked about taking a block of lead and a block of gold, and touching them together for only a second. When you take them apart, they may look the same, but they're not. There are molecules of gold on the lead and molecules of lead upon the gold. Both blocks are changed forever and will never be the same. Can you imagine the impact any of us can have by going to school with other students not for a mere second, but for a semester, a year, or four years? Now just imagine the impact our faculty and staff colleagues can have over fifteen or twenty years. This impact—this permanent change in our lives as a result of our relationships with others—is what community is all about.

Take the time now to remember how important others are in your life, and acknowledge that. And, at the same time, recognize that you are truly important to more people than you may imagine. Perhaps the symbol of dropping our flags to half mast for a departed member of our community should be a reminder for us to appreciate the richness of our relationships every day, and not wait for a tragedy. Let's start savoring our relationships today.

Experience Monkou

Christopher M. Bruneau

Monkou Restaurant, serving Chinese and Polynesian cuisine, is hard to miss with neon signs and vibrant colors. Located at 676 Washington Street on Route 1 in South Attleboro, Massachusetts, the building's appearance ensures customers that a festive and fun dining experience awaits.

Upon entering Monkou, you will be greeted with the bubbling sounds and relaxing sights of a waterfall. While sipping on Chinese tea, one cannot help but notice the collection of ethnic masks covering the walls. Also, scenic murals add to the ethnic flavor of the restaurant. Bamboo is used to help the customer feel one has escaped to a far away land. Patrons will be amused with faux palm trees towering over tables; this theme is continued on the carpets. The festive colors are carried inside; red, green, blue and yellow decorate tables, chairs and walls.

For an appetizer, the classic choice of Beef Teriyaki and Barbecued Boneless Spare Ribs are guaranteed to not disappoint you. For an entree, Moo Shi is sure to satisfy your cravings. Moo Shi literally means "fragrant yellow blossoms of sweet olives." This dish consists of a savory combination of exotic vegetables like wood ears, tiger lily stems, cabbage, carrots, eggs and your choice of meat, all scrambled together and served with Mandarin Pancakes. In addition, Kung Pao style calls for a variety of ingredients such as Szechwan, red and green peppers, water chestnuts, onions, garlic, scallions, soy sauce, sugar, vinegar, and peanuts, which produce a multiplicity of tastes.

Others savor Yu Hsiang style, an aromatic spicy dish famous for its use of garlic and vinegar. This dish consists of red and green peppers, white mushrooms, wood ear, and your choice of meat. Chicken Delight is also highly recommended; tender chicken chunks and shrimp sautéed with black mushrooms, pea pods, and water chestnuts in oyster sauce contributes to this dining experience's uniqueness. Gai Poo Lo Mein seemed to be enjoyed the most by all. This dish will have you raving about it for weeks; it consists of chicken deep-fried in egg batter, lobster, and shrimp nested on top of soft noodles and gourmet spices.

Take-out is available for most menu items. A full bar is present. Monkou is open Monday through Thursday from 11:30 a.m.—1:00 a.m., Friday and Saturday from 11:30 a.m.—2:00 a.m., and Sunday from 12:00 p.m.—1:00 a.m. Call 399-8020 for directions or additional information.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Applications now available for UNCF-Merck Science Fellowships

Program targeted for African American Students pursuing careers in biomedical research

submitted by The College Fund/UNCF

Applications are now available for the UNCF-Merck Science Fellowships. These fellowships are part of a ten-year initiative—known as the UNCF-Merck Science Initiative—funded by Merck & Co., Inc. and administered by The College Fund/UNCF. The goal of the Initiative is to expand America's pool of world class African American biomedical research scientists.

The fellowships are targeted to African American students at both minority and majority college and universities. Students can obtain applications through the chairperson's office of their departments. The application must be postmarked for return to The College Fund/UNCF by January 15, 1997.

Each year for the next nine years, scholarship and fellowship awards will be made on a competitive basis to 37 students at the undergraduate, graduate, and postdoctoral levels. These awards will be announced in April of 1997. They are:

- Tuition scholarship of up to $25,000
- Two Merck summer internship stipends totaling $10,000

UNCF-Merck Graduate Science Research Dissertation Fellowships

Twelve graduate fellowship will be awarded in 1997. Each fellowship covers a minimum of 12 months up to a maximum of 24 months of graduate study. Each fellowship includes:

- Fellowship stipend up to $25,000
- Department grant up to $15,000

UNCF-Merck Postdoctoral Science Research Fellowship

Ten postdoctoral fellowship will be awarded in 1997. Each fellowship covers a minimum period of 12 months up to a maximum of 24 months. Each fellowship includes:

- Fellowship stipend up to $40,000
- Department grant up to $15,000

Bryant Peer Educators meet Mickey Mouse

Beginning Wednesday, November 13, 19 students and Lori Harrison will be traveling to Orlando, Florida. This trip to Orlando is to attend the BACCHUS/GAMMA National Conference, which offers over 70 educational sessions. At this conference, students from 700 colleges and universities across the United States and Canada will gather to share, educate, and learn from one another information about health issues used to create programs on their own campus. Programs like "Alcohol Jeopardy," "Sexy Jeopardy," and "Drawing the Shades," speakers like Bobby Petrocelli, Katie Koestner, and Bertice Berry; and programs such as Safe Break Week and 3D Month are all a result of conference attendance. Of the 74 sessions offered, the facilitators of CHOICES (Choosing Healthy Options in Competitive Environments) will be presenting a program that they offered to the athletic teams at Bryant.

In addition to attending the programs, the Bryant students will be attending an awards banquet on Saturday evening in hopes of receiving awards for:

- (Chapter of the Year
- (Peer Theater of the Year - "Drawing the Shades"
- (Program of the Year - "Coffee Talk"

The students representing Bryant College are as follows:

Peer Educators - Sean Kenny, James Warner, Brian Willinsky, Christine Vazquez

CHOICES - Dottie Beattie, Alison Gerard, Allison Maloney, Stephanie Zanfagna

GAMMA - John Adani, Heidi Giblin, Stacy Keegan, Charles Roth

BACCHUS - Lauren Dabkowski, Kelyn Laramie, Brenda Petrone, Colleen Sullivan, Rebecca Thayer, Jennifer Wilson, Sharon Yuhas

Join the Celebration!

On Tuesday November 12, the Student Alumni Association will hold a meeting for this year's Festival of Lights. If you would like to get involved in the campus wide holiday event, join us at the Alumni House at 6p.m.

Hope to see you there!

BACCHUS

Leanna Mansour

Hello everyone! Just to inform you, the drug Ritalin, which is prescribed to treat Attention Deficit and Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), is causing serious problems. This drug is taken to improve concentration and control behaviors that interfere with learning and everyday activities. When abused, kidney failure and strokes can occur.

A few immediate effects are insomnia, hypertension, seizures, and confusion. Long term effects may be nervousness, hallucinations, delusions, and death.

There is a high addiction rate with this drug. In many states, including Rhode Island, this drug is a controlled substance.

If you know someone who is suffering from heart pounding, headaches, or extreme agitation after taking ritalin orally, call an EMT immediately. Do not leave that person alone. For additional help or information you may call: Health Services at x6220, Counseling Services at x6045, Public Safety at x6001, or the Poison Control Center at 444-5727. Please take this seriously. This drug could take control over your life or the life of someone you love.

Beta Theta Pi

David Koestner

Our annual putt-a-thon will be coming up soon and this function will support the Muscular Dystrophy Association. The brothers of Beta Theta Pi raised money at the Patriots game this past Sunday by selling programs. A portion of the proceeds will be going to the MDA.

This week was full of surprises. Boyd fought the screw and the screw won. Spalding pulled a Craig Nelson in the bathroom and on his roommate. Mork had his belongings rearranged on Saturday. The brothers who went to Tri-Sig's Halloween party would like to thank them for a great time. Floyd went down hard on Flip and Ragoo's table. Shep had the best meal of his life on the way home from Foxboro.

Quotes of the week: "Alph, I switched bodies tonight." "Nice..."

Commuter Connection

Andrew Young

Greetings Commuters, from Andy, the Commuter! Well, this article has been long awaited, but it is finally here. Okay, here's the important stuff that is by now old news. Ellen Begunts has been elected our new vice president and Darryl Marsh is our new historian. In case you missed our meeting last Wednesday, not only did you miss out on FREE pizza and soda, but you missed out on all that we discussed as well. The bus is full for the Boston trip, but any and all are welcome to meet with us on November 30 and follow in their cars.

The Smith house has been offered to the Commuter Connection for a second time and we are seriously considering moving the office to there from the Bryant Center. The Smith House is the old BRYCOL House and tours are being planned so all members can deliver their input on whether or not we move. The up side is that it offers a great deal more space, however, it is out past all the dorms and would make for quite a hike to our classes in the Unistructure.

The commuter volleyball team placed third in the playoffs! Thanks to everyone who played. Our next adventure will be placing a team in the Bryant college bowl. This is a Jeopardy like game in which we could win lots of prizes.

That's all for now. So long Commuters!

Delta Chi

James Dow

As always, I will start this week's edition of the column by bringing you up to date on D-Chi Sports. This sports' report is brought to you by all the athletes who play through injury. Our volleyball team finished in second place, behind the Veterans, (aka Peterson's Kids), last week. Strong performances were turned in by Ego and his protégé. Our B-Team in football finished the season last week by losing in the playoffs to DOA, while our A-Team is still in the post season hunt, as they are in action this week. Lastly, we start hockey very soon, and are looking for a strong season. Broadway & F-Sharp were named as Captains last week by our over-worked sports chairman.

A thank you goes out to Tri-Sig for a great time on Friday Night. Also, a special thanks goes out to all our guests who came up on Saturday Night to make our annual "Red Death" a success.

I officially ended my long tenure at Foxboro Stadium as Fat Tom; just couldn't find any room in the commissary for me—maybe thanks because he takes up all the room; just an idea!!

Killer made his return to the floor an eventful one as he got in the face of JK and pointed at Goose's. JoBu was his usual mess this weekend; just don't look her in the eyes!! Ego & Goose renovated P-Nut's room, as Huey played police. Even our AM's made the headlines this weekend as Q spent Saturday night on a floor; however, it was not ours. Hey Wal-Nut, what's her name? Hey Scooter, tired of matches, we've got some, Dorm 3, 2nd floor. I want the banner in the Rotunda ASAP!!! Finally, I am sorry this Archway column is rough, but it is still better than when P.T. wrote it. That's all for this week. Until next week, fire me up!!!!

Quote of the Week: You're just not listening to me; listen to me! (Killer)

Tip of the Week: Don't talk to Dutch at Foxboro!!!!!!

Stat of the Week: The Patriots are currently tied for first place in the AFC East with the Buffalo Bills.

Delta Zeta

Nicole Greenlaw

Girls, we're free! The floor gave Phoenix a dose of her own medicine: "You aren't going anywhere." Thanks TKE for Friday night; it was a "fun hour." Philly, is it reality or a fairy tale? So many meanings for the poster. "She's a Rip-Roarin' Vein"-Murphy. Hey Fah-Q. Mattie wants to thank Jaycee and Pepper for last week. Galileo and Vegas, I think that is everybody. -Silva. Wesli and Jaycee know how to have a good time with little resources available. McGee and Vegas want to welcome Phi Kap's new toy! Thanks to Delta Chi for a great time on Saturday night. Quote of the Week: "Wats sup now!"

The Hunger Coalition

Shane Sachdev

It was nice to see some new faces at the last meeting, and I would like to encourage everyone who could not make it to the November 5 meeting to come on down on the 19th of November. We have a lot of exciting events planned, and you could be a big part of them. Remember to get some canned goods for the upcoming Canned Food Drive. You can make a big difference.

The goal of the Hunger Coalition at Bryant is to make America better by working locally. We help the churches and missions of RI provide necessary services to the homeless. Help us make a difference.

Stay tuned to this column for future events and information on food drives. Feel free to call me at x4138 or Brian at x8300.

Tip of the week: When you help the homeless, you help the country.

Bryant Karate

Jason Bean

Pil Son! It's good to see that everyone survived Halloween and the weekend. Everybody remember that belt tests are only a couple weeks away. Unfortunately, that is the only serious thing I have to say this week.

We would like to thank everybody who stopped by A3 this weekend. It appeared that everybody there had a good time (some more than others). Ryan found out what it feels like to be on the losing side of a five overtime series. Also, it seemed like Sifu and Phil enjoyed the long range shoot-out.

It looked like all of the upper and lower belts actually showed up for a change. Everyone was dying when it seemed like Keith was giving a free Footloose and Macarena clinic. However, we weren't laughing when his fellow employees stopped by to inform us of various infractions. I would like to take this time to thank all of the uniformed officers who came by Friday (Wasn't Halloween the night before the party?). Stay tuned in class as we may have more planned for the coming weekend.

From now on I will try to keep all plywood comments to myself since it seems some people are not very receptive to my ideas. Keith, remember that the more times you try to kick me out, the longer I'm actually going to stay. It looks like Matt may have won the battle, but not the war in his Clash of the Titans with Mike (He must have cheated!). Question: Who got in more trouble this weekend, Ken or Spicy? Quote of the week: "It's not a party here unless there's blood." Until next time, BKKA!

Kappa Delta Phi

David Kaplan

Good day to all. I would like to take some time out to congratulate our new president, Bill Clinton. Better luck next time, Ross. I hope everyone fulfilled their duties and voted in this election. Well, lets talk about the latest campus activities: Friday night, whether you were at Tri-Sig, Theta, or Phi-Sig, you had a good time. Thank you all for being gracious hosts. Personally, I was at Tri-Sig, and ohhhh Nellly!!!

Friday afternoon, the Women's Rugby team got me to go to their townhouse. I had a ton of fun there (which slowed me down for the night). We'll have to do it again. This last weekend saw the appearance of many Alumni. Chad, Smiley, Lil' Steve, and Wheeler all made appearances. Saturday night was the infamous Kappa Delta Phi Halloween '96. I know everyone had a blast. Everyone was feeling all right. Crowley finally did not have to man the radio all night. The question on everyone's mind is: What's with the high school slow dance music? The rest of the evening went quite well. And the winner is...Marsha Bradey. Well, this weekend is going to be our alumni weekend. It should be a great time. Look out world. Also, Monday is Veterans Day, and even though we have school, we should still take the time out to appreciate what a great country it is that we live in and remember all those who made their sacrifices to preserve the things that we so often take for granted. God Bless America.

Well, now it is time to boogie. Oh, wait. I mean it's time for this week's TOP 10! So. Now with the help of my co-staff writer, Ryan Delaney, we present...coming out of the offices of Cleveland, Ohio...The top 10 reasons why Images is now doing wash/dry/folds for only sixty five cents a pound.

10) To pay for a working copier to be put outside Images.

9) Its all a big cycle. People are now using all of their change for the Coke machines and now need to do something with their Coke stained clothes.

8) Apparently Bryant thought that Images' workers were not working hard enough, so the school decided to make them do some other things while they wait for copies; now Images has a new image.

7) After all of his work, Ole' man Tupper needs to wash his work clothes.

6) Now that Everyone knows about the pool, people need a place to wash their bathing suits.

5) Coffee stains from The Junction.

4) Images figures it'll make a killing. It normally takes about four quarters to wash your clothes, and about eight to dry them, so they figure they can compete with the price. And what's even more interesting, they are further cutting costs by milking the Bryant water supply through that pipe in the men's bathroom downstairs in the library; look for decreases in fountain size on heavy loads.

3) They had to. Koffler was running them out of their other business. Who has the upper hand now? Sure you can print in color, and do resumes at Koffler, but can Koffler do your laundry. Who has the upper hand now? Mighty Koffler hath fallen.

2) Sandy, who had to get money so he could Pre-Reg, found a new scam. In the door for $0.65, and out the door for $0.55. He's really making ten cents on every pound. Its all about being the middle-man.

1) With all of the freshmen who go home on the weekends this year, Bryant Administration, thinking it was the laundry that drove them away, made a last ditch effort to save the school.

Well, that's about all I have for this week. I have been getting a lot of suggestions and enjoy hearing them all. If anyone wishes to leave their ideas, they can either call 4030, or e-mail me at dkaplan@acad.bryant.edu

Well remember: Don't forget the liberties that you have and the people who have fought to secure them. Have a safe and happy Veteran's Day Weekend.

MSU

Louis Camacho-Rosado

Hello Everyone!

At the last MSU meeting, we had our version of a Halloween Bash.

This past week was a busy week for MSU. This week the MSU will hold another "What's on Everyone's Minds?" speaker series on Interracial Dating.

Next week, the MSU will be celebrating "Unity Day" on Wednesday, November 13, 1996. This event will be held in the Bryant Center from 10:00 am - 2:00 p.m. This "Unity Day" will be focusing on Caribbean and Hispanic cultures. Please stop by, it will be a lot of fun.

The MSU will be holding it's meeting next Wednesday, at 4:00 p.m., in Bryant Center room 2A. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Ciao!

Hello everybody. I hope everyone has had a great week. First, we would like to wish Tricia and her twin, Mary, very happy 21st birthdays. Congratulations to Alese on her CIS exam. Chambers got two interviews; congrats to you, Liberty. She also got her beloved Ethel, thanks Dad. Lush, we are glad you are okay, please take care of yourself, we love you.

And now for the weekend. The sisters would like to thank Delta Chi, Delta, and Sig Ep for a great weekend. Hey Delta Chi, were you missing a pledge on Saturday night? Ohh, we know where you could find him. Lush, dingding Sunshine's ready for round four. -Screech. Thank you to L5, and also to everyone who came up on Friday. Thanks to Delta Chi for the pumpkin. Hello brothers! Sorry about the two week absence. After officially taking over this job, there will be no more missed articles. So, with that out of the way, let's recap this week's events.

Thanks to Theta for a great Halloween party. It was a blast. Too bad we missed the President, but Mrs. Machtley was a very gracious host. McGrath loves Halloween, insists that her costume does not come off, and also demands that Scerbo watches. Hey buddy, next time you go swimming, don't forget your bathing cap. Costume of the year goes to Captain Atherton. Yo Jeff, set me up, man!

Paintball outside was about as fun as banging your head against a wall as hard as you can about a hundred times. The brothers who played inside claim that it was a good time, but nobody believes them. Saturday night was about as fun as paintball outside after JR and Labonte decided to join America's Most Wanted. Where does the school find the money to pay those snipers, anyway?

Concerns won his first complete game, but the other players question the stats—I don't know why. Come on guys, accurate or not, it was the funniest game ever. We even had our own Leonardo da Vinci. How in the world did he make that Viking ship?

The other game was interrupted by Sideshow's mysterious mummifying routine. That was probably the most interesting/retarded thing that I have ever seen.

Everybody was glad to see that Snake, Rocco, and Shane are back safely from their phishing trip...well, almost everybody. Shaggy's father didn't want that Mercedes anyway. The trial of the century is still ongoing. That's what you get when you put Shaggy and Sideshow on the stand. On a final note, we will refrain from bashing other fraternities in our articles. Till next week...

The Bryant Players

Meagan Mirkovich

Greetings everyone! Congratulations to everyone who received a part in M*A*S*H! It will definitely be a smash hit!

In other news: Andrea has finally received a role that is closer to her age. Kelli just loves those male roles. The Biltmore was overrun with Players on Saturday night. Kelli finally got her ab roller back.

Overheard: "Stairs are very tricky things!"

Student Alumni Association

Darrell Cook

Thanks to everyone who attended last weeks meeting and helped in our mass mailing project for the fall Survival Kits. I didn't know mass mailing could get so confusing, that is, keeping the zip codes all in order.

A special thanks to Karen and Jenn for chairing this years first attempt at selling candy and carnations for Halloween. Thanks also to all those who helped in any other way. For a first attempt, I think that we did quite well.

Reminder to all SAA members that in a few weeks we will be holding elections. Our beloved and devoted President will be leaving us in December and a new e-board must be elected. Also the possibility of a Zoo Tour is in the works for the spring semester. Stay posted for further details.

Student Senate

Scott Rattigan

Welcome back to another installment of news and notes from your Senate! First off, Black & Gold Night is this Friday. We encourage everyone to come and support our teams. It will be a fun-filled, action-packed evening. Festivities begin at 7:00 p.m. in the gym. Be there!

Congratulations to Shirley Brackenwagen, Tracy Caprio and Allyson Tabroff, for being selected Student Leaders of the Month for October! All three did a magnificent job organizing events during Parents' Weekend. By the way, next year, Parents' Weekend will be held from October 24-26.

Registration for TAP's New York City trip on December 8 continues; stop by the Senate Office for more details. If you have not received the premier edition of The Chronicle, stop by the Senate Office, or see your RA as soon as possible. Finally, remember that the Student Senate meetings are open to all, every Wednesday @ 4:00 p.m. in Papitto Dining Room. Come let your voice be heard. Next week, learn more about what the Senate is doing, as the second issue of The Link is released. Until next time....

Society For Human Resource Management

Hello again everybody. I hope that everyone's Fall Weekend went well. Keep going strong, we only have three weeks until Thanksgiving break.

The Student Programming Board would like to thank everyone for participating in all the events this past weekend. I know we had a good time, and it seems that everyone else did as well. As a whole, every event that was planned for this weekend did very well.

There are no activities planned for this week or weekend due to the fact that all e-board members and chairs will be attending the NAACO conference in Marlboro, Mass. This will allow us to book new entertainment at discount prices; we'll be trying to get more acts that the Bryant community would be interested in seeing.

I hope everyone has a good week. Bye all!!

Theta Phi Alpha

Jolie Steel

Hey Theta! I hope everyone had a good week and a fun Halloween. Thursday, November 7, we will be cleaning up a strip of Route 295 for Adopt-a-Highway. Also, on Thursday, we will be hosting Friends with the Sisters of Theta at 7:30 p.m. Anyone is welcome to come; we are on the third floor of dorm 3.

Thanks to Phi Kap for a great Halloween event. Thanks to everyone who visited us on Friday night. Were they still in high school? Saturday morning with Beta was fun. Later, Parente's was great once again; go Beta and Theta! Next Saturday Larry's! Pepper and Abbey had fun at Delta on Saturday night, and thank you to Delta Chi for a fun Saturday night as well.

Hey Mona, thanks for showing me the ropes-Saybelle. Steel Magnolias bonded Wednesday night; nice hat, Autumn. Nobody knows, it's too early, I'm just driving bad! Hey, do you have a light? Eddie showed up late night with presents. Pixie, where's your other claw? Hey Justin, Doodad?-Allyson. Hey Scerbo, Theta Online needs to know how your date went? By the way, you have no etiquette! Spyder-Aurora Borealis. Have a great week-Lata Theta!

What's up, TKE?! Once again, I decided to exit Bryant on Friday. I went to a fun place; Stonehill College was the name. Upon my arrival back here at Bryant around 2:30 a.m., I ran into a few TEKES from Bentley on our floor. Thanx DZ for the power hour Friday. Hey Philly, what the #11 is that poster really of?

On behalf of Chimp Z., I would like to apologize to everyone who went to the hockey game Saturday; our Bryant boys didn't pull through in the clutch, but I guess that is why they're not in the NHL (an A for effort). But I'm sure Everyone had a great time after the game drowning their sorrows over a couple (2, 3, or 12) beers, right Zip?

As a reminder, if you didn't sign up for the Patriots game, DO SO or else. Ya, that's a threat; any problems, see me, tough guy!!!!

Castanza, we finally pulled through; thanks a lot for saving our butts.

Quote of the week: "Premobolin" Thank You.

Ivy May Kusler

Hello everyone, I hope you all had a great Halloween! Mine was so good, I hardly had a voice the next day. Beta, you stole our song! Happy belated 20th birthday to Vicki. Dana, the big one is getting closer and closer!! Gina, get well soon! We all really miss you. Sherry, we hope that your actuarial exam went well! Congratulations, Shila, on getting accepted!!

Friday night was a great time, thanks to all who attended. Harriet Rose was a great time, it was so good to see her! Next year we better not invite the skeleton, though; some of us got a little too close with him. Mel got the battle wound! Kelly, apparently they didn't see the size of Curt; nice try, guys! Thanks, Beta, for your help. Dana, I'm sorry I didn't have any shows for you this time. Hey Sig Ep, sorry about those messages! Jamie, thanks for your help Friday night; I got the outside for once. Thanks Delta for a great time on Saturday.

Tonya wake me up at 11:30 a.m.; I promise I'll get up! Is it just me or do we live next to a barn with all those weird animal noises -Nikki. Big money, big money, no whammy, stop whammy! All right Tonya, what's a swag? Thanks for the tidal wave, Jeff and Ho; we're still waiting for that apology letter! -Dorm 5.

The view from dorm 5 was excellent this weekend! Karen, who else did you slap Friday night. Chorney, thanks for the fat bruise your Jeep gave me! Cindy, let your mind go blank; exactly what did you and Erika do that night? -Mel. The Brady Bunch is a good time. -Alison. I did it! Shila, you've got to come watch him at night, he goes nuts!

That's about it for this week! Get ready, weasels, for a good time Saturday. Kelly, your parents are going to be sick of us! Have fun, Wussies! Check ya later! -Ivy May.

Bulldog hockey suffers first setback

Bob Clark

Bryant's hockey team took to the ice Saturday night for their first home game against league opponent Coast Guard. President Machtley was on hand to drop the ceremonial first puck in kicking off the new season. The game started with Coast Guard posting 3 quick goals within the first 4 minutes. From then on, the two teams battled it out in an equally played and hard-hitting game. Coast Guard added a fourth goal with 6:20 left to play in the first period. Bryant responded with 3 goals before the end of the period to make the score 4-3. Jack Edwards got the Bulldogs on the board with an assist from Steve Delaney. The second goal came off the stick of Seth Anderson, assisted by Shawn Tyler and Paul Dube. Delaney then tipped in a Joe Pollatta shot with an assist from Kevin Gill to close out the first period.

The Bulldogs tied the game just two minutes into the second period on a goal by Tyler with assists from Anderson and Eric Romiza. Coast Guard answered back quickly with a goal, then and again halfway through the second period, making the score 6-4. Coast Guard added an insurance goal late in the third period to seal the victory. Pete Somers turned away 30 shots for Bryant, but it was in a losing cause as the team fell 7-4.

Bryant's next game is this Friday, November 8, in Burrillville, when they will host league opponent Salve Regina. The Bulldogs are looking for their first league win and a big victory over a team they have already beaten twice in pre-season play, 5-2 and 9-3. Salve will be looking to avenge their two earlier losses. The team would like to thank everyone who came to show their support on Saturday, especially President Machtley. The team hopes to see you on Friday! You can also catch Bryant hockey on the road as they travel to Mass Maritime on Saturday and Daniel Webster on Sunday.

Women's basketball: reloading year lies ahead

Le Tien
Sports Editor

Bryant women's Basketball team faces a tough challenge this year as the team reloads its arsenal. The objective will not be to duplicate the performance of last season's 19-10 team last year that went to the NCAA North east Regional Tournament, but rather to improve as the season progresses. But this does not mean the Bulldogs will suffer a major setback either. The team is young but loaded with talent for head coach Mary Burke (sixth season, 70-66).

The first obstacle for the team will be replacing Bryant's all-time women's leading scorer in Liz Davies. Losing four other seniors from last year's team does not help either, but the team is full of seasoned veterans who know how to play in the NE-10. Senior point guard, Mary Beth Feeney (8.1ppg, 6.7 apg) will now have to assume the leadership role that is now left void with the departure of Davies.

The backcourt looks a little weak with plenty of inexperienced players; however, it will be a matter of time before the strong recruiting class (which consists primarily of guards) contribute to the success of the team.

The starting frontcourt is suspect with only two quality players. Senior Kristin Regan (6.4 ppg, 5.9 rpg) and junior Rebecca Hardt (7.9 ppg, 3.6 rpg) head the list, but the bench is very questionable, as is the center position. This means the pressure will fall on Regan and Hardt to remain healthy and stay out of foul trouble. With a small team, rebounding will be most important if this team is to be successful.

Analysis: On paper, Bryant looks to have a tough year. However, under coach Burke, anything is possible. With the loss of five seniors, including all-time great Davies, the Bulldogs will most likely get off to a slow start, but hopefully things will pick up as the season progresses. Leadership will most definitely come from Feeney, Regan and Hardt.

This week's roundup

CROSS COUNTRY'S ROGERSON NAMED NE-10'S TOP FRESHMAN

Nikki Rogerson (Essex Junction, VT/Essex Junction) was named the NORTHEAST-10 Freshman of the Year at the conference's cross country awards dinner Saturday evening. Rogerson was the top freshman female finisher at the NE-10 Cross Country Championship held at Bryant earlier that day, finishing fourth out of 85 runners with a time of 20:30. She was also a first-team all-conference selection. The Bulldogs, led by Rogerson, turned in a third-place performance, as Quinnipiac captured its second consecutive conference crown. Other Bryant notables were sophomore Michele Mottola (Stoneham, MA/Stoneham), who finished eleventh (20:48) and made the all-NE-10 second team for the second straight year, senior Carrie Stygar (Lebanon, CT/Lyman Memorial), who finished 18th (21:06) and sophomore Jackie Ely (Bohemia, NY/Connetquot), who finished 24th (21:24).

The men finished tied for sixth overall as Le Moyne took the title in its first year in the conference. Freshman Nicholas Lamb's (Hingham, MA/Hingham) 17th-place finish (28:22) out of 92 runners paced the Bulldogs. Sophomore Matt Roloff (S. Portland, ME/S. Portland) finished 21st (28:51) and junior Shawn Nassaney (Pawtucket, RI/St. Raphael) finished 25th (28:59).

MEETS THIS WEEK: at NCAA East Regional at Slippery Rock (PA) (11/9)

VOLLEYBALL:

The Bulldogs (15-10, 5-3 NE-10) dropped two matches last week to a pair of red-hot opponents.

Bryant fell 3-2 to Stonehill (23-2) in a key conference match Tuesday. Outstanding individual performances were turned in by Jennifer Carvahlo (E. Providence, RI/E. Providence-51 assists and 13 digs), senior co-captain Stacy Defaranos (W. Haven, CT/W. Haven-14 kills and 16 digs), senior co-captain Alicia Kadlick (Weymouth, MA/Weymouth-12 kills and 13 digs), Janet Rooney (Braintree, MA/Archbishop Williams-24 kills), and Marcie Monaco (North Haven, CT/North Haven-10 kills and 18 digs).

Carvahlo had 32 assists, and Rooney and Defaranos each added 11 kills in the Bulldogs 3-0 loss to Pace (25-6) Saturday.

MATCHES THIS WEEK: ASSUMPTION (11/5), at UMass-Lowell (11/9)

MEN'S SOCCER:

The Bulldogs (6-9-1, 1-7-1 NE-10) ended the season with a 1-1 week. Jared Dewey (Sharon, MA/Sharon) finished up in style, scoring four goals and two assists. The junior midfielder's 16 goals and 36 points are the most by a Bryant player since 1985. Dewey exploded for three goals and an assist in Bryant's convincing 5-0 triumph over Sacred Heart Wednesday. Dan Cain (S. Windsor, CT/S. Windsor) played 79 minutes in goal and made 12 saves. It was the final home game for Bryant seniors Chris Benjamin (Simsbury, CT/E. Granby), David Chase (Mattapoisett, MA/Old Rochester), Mike Rondinelli (Norwood, MA/Norwood), Nelson Castro (E. Hartford, CT/E. Hartford), Chris Anderson (Madison, CT/Daniel Hand) and John Hennessey (Plymouth, MA/Plymouth North).

The Bulldogs lost 3-2 in overtime to Quinnipiac Saturday, despite a goal and an assist from Dewey. Mark Sokolski (Vernon, CT/Rockville) tallied his sixth goal of the season.

Men's basketball: Shooting for the stars

Le Tien
Sports Editor

With four returning starters, the Men's Basketball Team looks to improve on last season's mark of 13-14. Under head coach Ed Reilly (eight season 59-128), Bryant should be competitive in their quest for the NE-10 Title this year. Leading the Bryant charge will be seniors Herman Thomas (10.0ppg, 4.0apg) and Noel Watson (16.1ppg, 6.5rpg). Thomas' slashing style at the point should provide plenty of excitement and open shots for Watson, who is considered one of the best guards in the conference. Together these two form perhaps the best back court combination in the NE-10 and should be able to keep opposing defenses on their heels. However, depth in the back court will be a major question mark as the season begins with no true backup point guard for Thomas.

Not to be outdone, Bryant's front court is deep and rugged. Senior center Steve Wiacek (8.3 ppg, 4.8 rpg), junior Marc Mulherin (10.3 ppg, 4.9 rpg), and sophomore Fred Wande (4.5 ppg) should provide an effective scoring punch from the blocks.

On the other side of the court, with good overall team speed, the Bulldogs should be one of the better defensive teams in the conference. With the 6'10 Wiacek anchoring the front-line, opposing offenses will have a difficult time shooting over this big man. Rebounding will be key for this team.

Top newcomers for Bryant include freshman forward Earl Jones (Cambria Heights, NY) and freshman guard Jason Bennett (Seekonk, MA).

Analysis: The Bulldogs are deep and talented this year and should make a run for the NE-10 crown. The strong senior class of Thomas, Watson, and Wiacek will provide the leadership that the team needs as they shoot for the stars.
